

Contents:

Chapter 1 The remarkable tree

An introduction to the most friendly and useful organism growing on our planet; how they work and how they sustain all living things.

Chapter 2 The fall and rise of woodland crafts

How woodland management sustained the local community for centuries, and the future of woodland crafts in the 21st century.

Chapter 3 British woodland tree species

- Native tree listed in order of their establishment in Britain after the recession of the last ice age
- A list of our native understory shrub population
- Naturalised trees

Chapter 4 The characteristics of broadleaf and conifer trees

How to differentiate between these two types of tree

Chapter 5 Wood characteristics by species

General information on the most commonly used trees in Britain

Chapter 6 The properties of wood by species

Defining the abilities of each species with regard to: tendency to warp during seasoning; bendability; toughness; decay resistance; ability to cope underwater; odour and taste; cleaving/riving qualities; average air drying time; average tree girth increase; average life expectancy.

Chapter 7 Coppicing – from trees to workable wood

Coppicing, the coppice cycle and the end products derived from it.

Chapter 8 A rough guide to measuring trees

Basic methods of measuring standing trees to determine their age, height and diameter.

Chapter 9 Traditional common uses for wood by species

Extensive quick reference tables, detailing the staggering number of traditional applications from each tree species.

Chapter 10 Traditional common uses of wood by application

A – Z of wooden products, and the best wood species traditionally used to make them.

Chapter 11 Tool finder

Invaluable guide to finding the suppliers for specialised tools and specific brands.

Chapter 12 Tool suppliers

Contact details for specialist suppliers, including suppliers of second hand tools.

Chapter 13 Tool blades and sharpening angles

Edge tool materials, bevels, and the choice of angles explained with a quick reference table at the end.

Chapter 14 The axe and the knife

Traditional names for the various parts of our two most iconic and useful tools.

Chapter 15 Green woodworking – A fusion of mind, body and spirit

Understanding the merits of working with unseasoned wood and the lifestyle associated with it.

Chapter 16 The bodgers of the woodlands

The facts about these craftspeople, and how the Windsor chair was actually made.

Chapter 17 The shaving horse and the pole lathe

General historical information on these two icons of design.

Chapter 18 Wood burning

Burning wood as a heat source explained, from felling to storing and burning, including the best and worst wood to burn for heat, by species.

Chapter 19 Wood burning stoves for workshops and small spaces

Suppliers of these specialist stoves

Chapter 20 Twenty useful things to do with wood ash

Really useful applications for what is generally considered to be a waste product

Chapter 21 Charcoal burning – An ancient craft with a promising future

From its historic origins to the present day

Chapter 22 The hedgerows of Britain

A brief history of the British hedgerows and the trees and shrubs contained within them.

Chapter 23 The hedgerow superstore

Traditional culinary, medical and domestic uses of hedgerow trees and shrubs

Chapter 24 Hedgerow liquers

Tempting spirit-based alternatives to traditional hedgerow wine.

Chapter 25 A natural woodland palette

Dye colours derived from tree parts.

Chapter 26 Tree folklore and myth

Fascinating collection of international folklore and myths surrounding our mysterious and revered tree species.

Chapter 27 Celtic tree astrology

The tree assigned to the lunar months, tree Ogham alphabet and symbolic meaning of tree species.

Chapter 28 The etymology of wood-related sayings

Revealing selection of explanations for some of our most common wood-related sayings.

Chapter 29 Woodland associations and organisations

A very helpful listing of the many organisations actively involved in preserving and enhancing our woodland heritage.

Chapter 30 Acronyms of the woodland industry

Associations and commonly used terms.

Chapter 31 Compendium of terms for tools, woodlands and craft

The most comprehensive collection of words traditionally associated with tools, woodland management, timber processing and woodland crafts.

Chapter 32 Recommended reading

Large selection of useful, specialised publications on related subjects.